Black History

Month

DESCRIPTION:

Often times the starting points of black history begin with slavery and oppression. This presentation aims to introduce a more accurate and balanced understanding of black history while instilling a renewed sense of pride.

One of Sean Mauricette's most popular and powerful talks, this presentation goes beyond slavery and takes a look at what black people were doing before the word black even existed. Stories of black saints such as Saint Maurice, to stories of the world's richest man King Mansa Musa are highlighted to show the impact that this advanced civilization had on the world, and the importance of their forgotten stories today. "Black history didn't start with slavery, it was interrupted by it." The presentation is wrapped up with one of Sean's most powerful performances which fuses beat-box and spoken word.

"Your virtual presentation, which included various forms of media, encouraged students and staff to use their interests and passions to create a future that is true to their core beliefs. You were able to provide countless examples of ways you used creativity to solve problems at each stage of your life."

Matt Johnston
Principal, Dr. Marion Hilliard Sr. PS, TDSB

"Sean has the unique ability to captivate audiences of students and adults both in the physical and virtual environment!...His workshops are a must have in your school."

Donielle Norville
Student Success Transitions Counsellor, TDSB

"In the United States the reviews were phenomenal! I am proud to know of such a giving man who is willing to use his gifts and talents to inspire a new generation to rise up and take advantage of the opportunities afforded to them or be courageous enough to create their own."

Alethea Bonello, Southeast Region, NAACP
